

The Wall

Text by Karin Beck

Music by Karin Beck & Helmut Huber (Arrangement)

You said to me: don't love me too much
And I tried it really, but only one tough
Of you broke all my designs
I was powerless – that's not in my line

I opened my heart like never before
Didn't think about pain, loved you more and more
Didn't asked why, loved without any demand
Over all these feelings lost my command

Now I'm building a wall between our hearts
It should save me from all the pain
But only one kiss of you takes it apart
So I build the wall every day again and again

You sit here and talk 'bout something, somebody
But you're not with me, that's only your body
And a feel that a little piece of my heart
Is dieing my love – That's painful and hard

Now I feel the Pain and it hurts so much
I long for your kisses for only one tough
Long for our times, our wonderful nights
My life is empty now – can't see any light

Now I'm building a wall between our hearts
It should save me from all the pain
But only one kiss of you takes it apart
So I build the wall every day again and again
