

The First Step

(Helmut Huber)

Remember the days, when it all begun
You hear laughing voices. You had so much fun
Life seemed to be easy. You never asked why
You swam weightless in an ocean under the deep blue sky

There was a time, when all things were clear
But these pictures in your memory start to disappear
You played with the green waves.

 You knew, they could tear you to the ground
Now you're covered with coldness and you feel drowned

You lean with your back on a cold wall
Who will catch you, when you fall ?
What will happen on the way, you've to go ?
You've done the first step in a world, you don't know
You've fear not to fail but who knows what's wrong
You're weak and desperate, but you should be strong.
What will happen on the way, you've to go?
You've done the first step in a world, you don't know.

Have you ever made a wish? What the future holds for you?
Do you hope deep inside, that your dreams come true?
The visions in the crystal ball - I'm not sure you wanna see.
You can't undo what you've done and you cannot flee.

What kind of a generation we've to raise up carefully?
Are you afraid not to be the mother you should be?
What's in your mind? What you've got to hide?
What's behind those scared eyes, lost in darkness?
 They are wide.

You lean with your back on a cold wall.
Who will catch you when you fall?
What will happen on the way, you've to go?
You've done the first step in a world, you don't know.
You've fear not to fail but who knows what's wrong
You're weak and desperate, but you should be strong.
What will happen on the way, you've to go?
You've done the first step in a world, you don't know.
